

Safety Tip of the Week

Labor Day 2015

AFRH

Safety Office reminds you that Labor Day is a traditional mark of the end of summer and one last time to enjoy the activities. Unfortunately many of those activities entail greater risks and can lead to tragedy.

Historically, Americans lose many lives to preventable accidents during the holiday weekend! We can prevent that from happening by staying focused on safety.

Each person at all levels must stay engaged and ensure those around them understands the risks of drinking and driving, as well as the safety, regulatory, and legal requirements for operating a motorcycle, watercrafts and other recreational vehicles.

Through our continued focus and diligence, we can keep friends and families safe from these preventable accidents.

This Labor Day stay engaged over the long weekend and throughout the year by incorporating learned Risk Management skills.
